EVROPAEVM Alert

Europaeum School Summer 2013

Rights and Citizenship in Europe:

are we really equal ?

Human rights are taken for granted in Europe, and among Europe's citizens. This was not always so. There were long battles to achieve such rights, and then to see Europe's Human Rights Act established, enacted and enforced. Now, the current crisis has helped to refocus our interest in civic, political and economic rights by challenging universalism and revealing gaps and inequalities This summer school – the 20th in our series - will bring together experts from law and justice, think tanks, NGOs and universities, to discuss key questions over five days of talks, panels, working groups, debates role-playing and discussions. More information will follow but questions are likely to include the following:

Does everyone deserve the same rights? What makes a good citizen? What rights do nations have to set their own rights? What do we mean by civil society*? Should Muslims be free to wear the* burqa*? After 1989, did the EU 'civilise' the former East and Central Europe region? Does the*

September 2nd - 7th 2013

For further information:

Please distribute the Workshop Poster to students and colleagues. To apply, please contact the Europaeum Office with a letter of intent, demonstrating your interest in the event, a short CV (max. 2 pages), and a support letter from your supervising professor.

Universitat Pompeu Fabra

Selected graduate will be heavily subsidised. They will, however, be expected to contribute €51 towards the special conference dinner, and will need to arrange their own travel.

The deadline for applications is 15th August 2013. Please apply as soon as possible!

democratic deficit mean a loss of political rights? Is Europe doing enough to respect Earth rights? Should migrants have the same rights as citizens? What is the balance between civil rights and duties? What do we mean by social, economic and health rights?

Contact:
The Europaeum
euroinfo@europaeum.ox.ac.uk