Digital Humanities Research Associate
I Tatti - The Harvard University Center for Italian Renaissance Studies

BIO

I hold a Master's degree in Digital Humanities and Digital Knowledge with honors from the Alma Mater Studiorum - University of Bologna. My research focuses on knowledge representation and extraction through ontologies, as well as on natural language processing and algorithms applied to music, museum artifacts, and literature. Previously I worked as a Full-stack Developer while attending the University of Naples Federico II and Ludwig Maximilian University of Munich, where I obtained a Bachelor's degree in Philosophy with a thesis on Logic, applied to a digital critical edition of the Tractatus Logico-Philosophicus by Ludwig Wittgenstein.

RECENT ACTIVITIES

Digital Humanities Research Associate — I Tatti - The Harvard University Center for Italian Renaissance Studies — 2020 - Today

Involved in the creation of a project that aims to explore innovative forms of publishing historical sources and scholarly narratives coupled with structured research data, and to develop an infrastructure able to handle these novel forms of digital objects. The structure will allow users to seamlessly navigate a complex network of scholarly assertions utilizing Linked Open Data. Furthermore, the nature of this machine-readable data lends itself well to both structured and serendipitous discoveries, making it attractive and engaging to both undergraduates and seasoned scholars alike. The overarching aim is to advance the global paradigm shift in publishing models, away from inward-looking, closed and costly strategies, towards an open and inclusive model that encourages collaboration and open-access.

Full Stack Developer — IctAndMore — 2015-2018

I managed digital projects in the context of IT consultancy for various companies, while participating in the creation and development of digital start-ups.
