

I am a Consultant whose expertise lies in intercultural awareness and a DEI specialist. My work aims at creating learning content that raises Cultural Intelligence (CQ) and helps make cultural encounters an enriching and eye-opening experience for learners all over the world. My approach bridges the current trend of global movement for study, work, and travel with the need to understand local particularities through an intersectional lens that foregrounds diversity and inclusion on both ends of cultural encounters.

By training, I am an Anthropologist and my research explored how gender, race, ethnicity, desire and sexuality connect in various contexts of social life in contemporary Japan. I have been sharing my ethnographic experience through traditional writing and graphic novel.
