

Curriculum Vitae

Linor Goralik (born Yuliya Borisovna Goralik) was born in in . She is a poet, prose writer, essayist, marketing consultant, advertisement expert, translator and jewelry manufacturer. She is an author of 20 books of poems and prose as well as children's books. She has translated into Russian Etgar Keret's novels and Vitautas Pliura's poems (in collaboration with Stanislav Lvovsky).

Since 2014 Linor Goralik has been Editor-in-Chief of the Booknik.ru internet portal which is dedicated to the Jewish literature and culture. She taught Costume Theory in the Russian State University for the Humanities and the Higher School of Economics in Moscow.

After the 2014 annexation of Crimea she returned to Israel, but continued to travel between the two countries until November 2021. She is a vocal opponent to Vladimir Putin's regime and to the 2022 Russian invasion of Ukraine. In August 2023 Goralik was added to Russia's list of 'foreign agents', according to the Russian Ministry of Justice Goralik had spoken out against Russia's "special military operation in Ukraine" and had "created or disseminated materials for foreign agents". She currently runs a lot of projects in support of Russian dissidents (ROAR, Novosti-26) and Ukraine population.

Linor Goralik won the Triumph Young Award (2003), Russian independent prize for excellence in literature and art, and the Portal Award (2012), international prize for fantasy novels and critics. Lives and works in Tel-Aviv (Israel).

Her latest prose works are:

Имени такого-то (Named After That One), Новое литературное обозрение, 2022
Черный огонь Венисаны (The Black Fire of Venisana) Livebook, 2022
Bobo Bobo open access, 2023