

Héctor J. Pérez is professor of audiovisual narrative at the Universitat Politècnica de València (Escola Politècnica Superior de Gandia). He undertook pre-doctoral Studies at the Musikwissenschaftliches Institut of The Universität Leipzig and received a European Ph.D. from the Universidad de Murcia, and continued post-doctoral studies at the Università degli Studi di Milano, Dipartimento di Estetica. A main line of his research is the study of the role of corporeal narration on acting in film, TV series and opera, and also works regularly in the cognitive aesthetics of television series and the relationships between mythology and cinema. His most recent book is Cine y mitología: de las religiones a los argumentos universales (Peter Lang, 2013). He is editor of SERIES, International Journal of TV Serial Narratives and Principal Researcher of the research project: www.researchseries.org
He is author of a documentary on artistic research entitled: Music: Research as Experience, available for free here (see below documentary)