I am a film director and producer of documentaries and cultural content for various media and platforms. With over 15 years of experience in this field, I have developed and honed my skills in audiovisual production, from writing and directing to editing and distributing.

My passion and expertise for documentary filmmaking and storytelling are driven by my mission to educate, inspire, and entertain the audience, as well as to reflect my commitment to social justice, human rights, and democracy. I have a deep knowledge and appreciation of the history, culture, and art of Italy, which I showcase in many of my projects. Some of the most recent and notable ones include "Bella Ciao - Per la libertà", a documentary about the song of the Italian resistance movement during World War II, which was released in theatres and broadcast on national television with a reach of 900k viewers; "Guercino - An art love story", the second episode of the anthology series "The Emilian School"; and "The Massacre: 85 travel to complete", a documentary about the Bologna massacre of 1980.
