PARTICIPATION IN THE ACTIVITIES OF A RESEARCH GROUP CHARACTERIZED BY NATIONAL OR INTERNATIONAL COLLABORATIONS

May 2026 - Participation in the research and implementation activities of the Erasmus+ Project Leadership and Institutionalization of Teaching Excellence (LITE) [Partners: Charles University (CZ), University of Copenhagen (DK), University of Bologna (IT), Global Governance Institute (BE)]. The activities include the mapping of institutional practices related to teaching excellence, the development of a competence framework and training materials, the collection and analysis of evaluation indicators for training activities, active participation in project meetings and coordination with partners, and the organization of the mid-term workshop hosted in Bologna.

- May 2026 – Participation in the research and implementation activities of the project SHARELEAVE – Parental Leave in Context: Social Drivers of Sharing Care, funded by the Research Council of Finland and conducted at the INVEST Research Flagship Centre, University of Turku, Finland (PI: Satu Helske). I am involved as a member of the international research team, with specific responsibilities for the comparative and regional dimensions of the project. SHARELEAVE adopts a multilevel longitudinal approach, combining Finnish population register data with comparative evidence from Sweden, Germany, and the Netherlands. The project investigates how parental leave and care arrangements are shaped by couple dynamics and broader social environments, with particular attention to social stratification and inequalities in leave uptake. More specifically, my research examines regional variations in gender-role attitudes through the integration of multiple datasets, exploring how attitudes towards gender, work, and care differ across subnational territories. This analysis is complemented by the study of political party manifestos, which are used as a proxy for the regional and political framing of family policies.
- ongoing
- Jan. 2025 – Participation in the research activities of the EU Next Generation Project: PE8
Dec. 2025 Age-It: Ageing Well in an Ageing Society [Spoke 5: *Sostenibilità dei sistemi di cura all'anziiano in una società che invecchia, Work Package 6, Leader: Marco Albertini, UNIBO; Co-Leader: Cecilia Tomassini, UNIMOL; Affiliates: UNIMIB, UNIPD, INRCA, BETA 80, ISTAT]. The research activities encompass the systematic collection and rigorous analysis of data and information to carry out a series of case studies examining local policies and services – spanning the public, private, and third sectors – designed to support caregivers of older adults. The research explores centers of varying scales, ranging from metropolitan cities to small municipalities in inland regions, across multiple Italian territories. Findings from this work were presented to several national conferences and have been incorporated into one book chapter for Il Mulino and into one article published in a peer-reviewed scientific journal (Class A, Scientific Disciplinary Area: GSPS-05/A).
- Sept. 2025 – Research collaboration with Torben Fischer (Zentrum für neue Sozialpolitik ongoing gGmbH) on the scoping review project “The party politics of eco-social risks in affluent welfare states”. The study systematically maps and assesses the literature on political parties as key actors in structuring political conflict and aggregating societal preferences around eco-social transformations. More specifically, the review investigates how and to what extent eco-social risks, conceptualized as a third generation of social risks, are reconfiguring the party politics of the welfare state.
- March 2024 – Participation in the research activities of the PREDLIFE consortium, funded by the October 2025 Academy of Finland and carried out by the University of Turku and the University of Jyväskylä (<https://sites.utu.fi/predlife/en/>) [PI of the consortium and leader of the sociological subproject: Dr. Satu Helske (University of Turku); PI of the statistical subproject: Dr. Jouni Helske (University of Jyväskylä)]. Research activities encompass developing a robust theoretical framework to analyze how prevalent gender norms at both national and local levels shape fathers’ uptake of parental leave. On the empirical side, a content analysis of Finnish party manifestos has been completed to construct two indices – measuring the level of “familialization” and “de-familialization” – which serve as proxies to assess the local prevalence of traditionalist or libertarian preferences regarding gender norms. Findings from this work were presented to a committee of the Finnish Parliament in October 2024 and have been incorporated into an article published in an international peer-reviewed scientific journal (Class A, Scientific Disciplinary Area: GSPS-08/A).

- Feb. 2022 – Collaboration with Torben Fischer (Martin-Luther - Universität Halle-Wittenberg)
Nov. 2024 in the project “The new politics of Eco-social Policies”. The paper theoretically analyzes the new emerging lines of conflict that characterize eco-social policies and the positions assumed by political actors. The theoretical framework is applied to the German case study. The results were presented at national conferences and included in a paper published in an international peer-reviewed scientific journal (Class A, Scientific Disciplinary Area: GSPS-08/A)

- Feb. 2019 – Participation in the PRIN Project “Models of Capitalism and Types of Aug. 2022 Democracy” [PI: Professor Carlo Trigilia; Participating Units: Università degli Studi di Firenze, Università di Bologna, Università di Macerata, Università degli studi di Teramo, Università degli studi di Torino]. The research activities were structured around two key areas: welfare policy analysis and social stratification analysis. On the policy front, a comparative study of welfare policies in advanced economies was conducted using both qualitative and quantitative methodologies. This was followed by an in-depth exploration of specific policy domains, particularly social investment policies and family policies, as well as an examination of reforms enacted in Italy over recent decades. On the social stratification front, the research focused on analyzing survey data on social stratification across eight countries included in the PRIN project (Denmark, Sweden, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, the United Kingdom, and the United States). Special attention was given to the evolution of "class politics" in the post-Fordist era. The findings from these research activities have been published in four book chapters and numerous articles appearing in both national and international peer-reviewed scientific journals.

- April 2022 – Participation in the Horizon 2020 Project “Working, Yet Poor”, [Coordinated by Dec. 2022 the Université du Luxembourg – 11 participants] Bologna Unit [Unit Coordinator: Prof. Dr. Carlo Zoli, DSG, University of Bologna; Coordinator of the Sociological Team: Prof. Dr. Nicola De Luigi, SPS, University of Bologna]. Within the framework of the project, I was entrusted with analyzing the Italian case study, focusing on social policies – including pensions, family policies, social inclusion, and poverty alleviation measures – and labor market policies, both active and passive, to evaluate their impact on in-work poverty (IWP). The research further delved into the evolution of family-related policy instruments in Italy, such as family allowances, parental leave, and early childcare services (ages 0–3), and their potential role in mitigating IWP. The findings were incorporated into the project’s National Report and disseminated through two articles published in national and international peer-reviewed scientific journals.

- Oct. 2020 – Collaboration with Torben Fischer (Martin-Luther-Universität Halle-Wittenberg, Nov. 2022 MLU, Halle, Germany) in the project “The coalitional welfare politics of Populist Radical Right Parties” The study focused on analyzing the welfare state programs of government coalitions that include radical right parties. The work analyzed the welfare reforms pursued in Italy and Austria by the Lega-M5S (2018-2019) and ÖVP-FPÖ (2017-2019) governments, respectively, and the role of the coalitions in determining specific policy outcomes. The results were included in a paper published in an international peer-reviewed scientific journal (Class A, Scientific Disciplinary Area: GSPS-08/A) and selected for the EPSR Early Careers Prize.

April-2020 Sept. Participation in the project “Europe in Tuscany” funded by the DG Regio of the European Commission. Project Coordinator: Prof. Laura Leonardi, University of Florence, DSPS: Participating Partners: Controradio Firenze, Sharing Europe and University of Florence. Research activities focusing on Tuscan university students’ perceptions of the European Union and their knowledge of the use of European Structural Funds in Tuscany, conducted through an online survey and the quantitative analysis of the data collected.

OTHER RESEARCH PROJECTS AND COLLABORATIONS

March 2025 – June 2026 Participation in the development and coordination of the Horizon Europe 2025 project proposal GENinCAREWORK – Intersectional Care/Work Negotiations under Constrained Career Trajectories [Call: HORIZON-CL2-2025-02-TRANSFO-04]. I was a member of the proposal’s core coordination and writing team, together with Roberto Rizza (University of Bologna) and Caroline de la Porte (Copenhagen Business School). Within this three-person team, I contributed extensively to the scientific design and drafting of the project and the strategic organization of the international consortium. The consortium included research teams from Spain (Universidad Autónoma de Barcelona), the Netherlands (Radboud University), Germany (University of Duisburg-Essen), Sweden (Lund University), Ireland (University College Dublin), Poland (SWPS University), Estonia (Tallinn University), and Belgium (European Social Observatory). GENinCAREWORK investigates how micro-, meso-, and macro-level factors interact in shaping parenting strategies and career trajectories across different work/care regimes. The proposal was selected among 8 out of 47 applications and invited to the second stage of the call in December 2025. The full proposal received a favorable evaluation and was placed on the reserve list, but did not receive funding under the initial allocation, which covered the three highest-ranked proposals.

Dec. 2024 – August 2024 Research Collaboration (co.co.co) with the Department of Political and Social Science of the University of Florence for an updating of the literature and data analysis concerning the relationship between social inequalities and democracy (Supervisor: Professor Carlo Trigilia/Luigi Burroni).

2025 - ongoing Collaboration with Nicola De Luigi (Department of Political and Social Sciences, University of Bologna) and Lorenzo Cattani (Department of Architecture, University of Bologna) on the research project “Gender Equality Attitudes in Europe”. The project initially focused on the evolution and main determinants of gender-role attitudes within and outside the household in Italy. This first phase resulted in an article published in a Class A peer-reviewed scientific journal (Scientific Disciplinary Area: GSPS-08/A). The research has subsequently developed into a broader comparative study of gender-equality attitudes across European countries, which is currently ongoing.

2024 - 2025 Collaboration with Roberto Rizza (Department of Political and Social Sciences, University of Bologna), Lorenzo Cattani (Department of Architecture, University of Bologna), and Rebecca Paraciani (Department of Political and Social Sciences, University of Bologna) on a research project examining mothers’ and fathers’ voluntary resignations from employment in Italy. The research led to the monograph Non è un lavoro per madri. Perché in Italia la maternità resta un ostacolo al lavoro

(Fondazione Giangiacomo Feltrinelli, Milano), which draws on national and local data to investigate the structural barriers pushing parents, especially mothers, out of employment.

- 2023 – 2025 Collaboration with Rebecca Paraciani (Department of Sociology and Business Law, University of Bologna) on the project “The Platformization of Cleaning Jobs”. The project investigates the impact of the platform economy on cleaning work. The research resulted in two articles: one focusing on the Italian case and one offering a comparative analysis of selected European cities, published respectively in national and international peer-reviewed journals classified as Class A in Scientific Disciplinary Area GSPS-08/A.
- 2024 – 2025 Collaboration with Nicola De Luigi (SPS, University of Bologna) and Claudia Colombaroli (University of Turin) in a research project investigating how the income and territorial dimensions shape households’ ECEC uptake, leading to multiple inequalities. The findings have been published in a national and in international peer-reviewed journals classified as Class A in Scientific Disciplinary Area GSPS-08/A.
- Jan. – Aug. 2023 Research Collaboration (co.co.co) with the Department of Political and Social Science of the University of Florence for an updating of the capitalisms and democracies literature review (Supervisor: Professor Carlo Trigilia/Luigi Burrone).
